Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 22 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Variable cloud and sunny spells. Some drizzle in far north.

Today:
Early mist and fog patches clearing, then a mainly dry day with variable cloud and some spells of sunshine, whilst some drizzle is possible in the far north and north-west.

Tonight:
Cloudy with a little drizzle in the far north and north-west, else dry with areas of cloud and also some clear spells leading to patchy frost and fog.

Tuesday:
Generally dry with a good deal of cloud and some sunny intervals. Becoming windier in the north-west with rain moving east across Northern Ireland and western Scotland during the afternoon.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Unsettled with strong winds and showers in northwestern areas, while mostly fine with variable cloud elsewhere. On Friday heavy showers overspread the UK, with these turning wintry in the northwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.